Town Hall Goes Smoke-Free

Located in the heart of Eastern Lancaster County, it comes as no surprise that Town Hall Restaurant in Blue Ball serves up delicious local favorites like pork and sauerkraut and shoo-fly pie. But it is the newest addition to the menu that is creating the current buzz. The restaurant is located in the local fire department building, so when the sign out front recently started to announce that Town Hall is now smoke-free, it seemed quite befitting of the location.

For over forty years, Town Hall Restaurant has been owned and operated by two generations of the Hummer family. After much consideration and with strong encouragement and support from his sister, Donna and longtime employee, Missy Moots, Alan Hummer made a big decision for a small business owner, to go smoke-free. From the looks of the busy dining room, the new policy appears to be a success. Missy Moots notes that the smokers have adapted to the change by using the bench set up for them outside. The staff has greeted the new policy appreciatively. Missy recalls the days when just a few cigarette smokers during the breakfast shift could cloud the air for the rest of the day. Now she cheerfully reports on all the new faces they are seeing and the former customers that are reappearing for a hearty breakfast or a filling home-style meal.

So, if you are passing through Blue Ball, doing some shopping at the Flower and Craft Warehouse or just looking for a new destination for good cooking, visit Town Hall Restaurant and let them know how much you appreciate smoke-free dining.

How did Blue Ball get its name?

Founded in 1766, when Robert Wallace built the first hotel at the crossroads. He erected a large copper ball on a signpost and painted it blue.
